

Stato attuale della ricerca scientifica in Italia

F.P. Schena

In brief

Current state of Italian scientific research

The main objective of the present Government is to rationalize scientific research in Italy. This editorial analysis identifies both weaknesses and strengths of research in our country and concludes that, firstly, the percentage of GNP invested in research and development must be increased and, secondly, Italian Universities should be open to scientists from other European and non-European countries.